The MSDS for the remaining items will be forwarded by the appropriate 3M divisions who have responsibility for these products. The MSDS you requested for the above materials are not enclosed. The MSDS would say very little because the products are nonhazardous "articles". The reasoning for this is given below.

3M is complying fully with the Federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) "Hazard Communication" standard (29 C.F.R. 1910.1200). These products are considered "articles" as defined in the OSHA "Hazard Communication" standard. See C.F.R. 1910.1200 (c). The standard does not apply to articles (29 C.F.R. 1910.1200 (b)(5)(iv)). Consequently, as articles these products are exempt from the Material Safety Data Sheet (MSDS) provisions of 29 C.F.R. 1910.1200 (g)(6).

These products are considered to be non-hazardous when used according to label directions or the intended use. However, since it is impossible to anticipate all possible applications and situations in which the products may be used, we urge you to determine that your use of the products is in accordance with the Federal Standard definition of an article. Thus, we base the information in this letter on your utilizing this product for the intended end-use function.
